

Dr. Ayesha Delany-Brumsey is the Director of the Behavioral Health Division of the Council of State Governments where she oversees a portfolio of work focused on how the criminal justice system intersects with the mental health, substance use disorder, homeless and social service systems.

Prior to her current role, Ayesha served as Director of the Behavioral Health Research and Programming at the New York City Mayor's Office of Criminal Justice and before that as Director of the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Program at the Vera Institute of Justice. She received her Ph.D. in clinical psychology from the University of California, Los Angeles.